HEADBANGERS HEAVEN:

March 29, 1985 – Jeanine Deckers, "The Singing Nun" (also known as Jeannine Deckers, Sœur Sourire ("Sister Smile") and Sister Luc-Gabrielle) and her lover Annie Pécher commit suicide by an overdose of barbiturates and alcohol. Deckers was 52;

Pécher commit suicide by an overdose of barbiturates and alcohol. Deckers was 32, Pécher was 41. The Singing Nun's 1963 single "Dominique" sold over two million copies and won a Grammy Award for the year's best Gospel song. Deckers and Pécher were despondent over the pending loss of a school they co-founded for autistic children because Belgian tax authorities claimed Deckers owed $63,000 in back taxes.

March 29, 2020 – Alan Merrill (born Allan Preston Sachs), lead singer of The Arrows, dies in Manhattan of COVID-19 related causes. He was 69. Merrill led quite an interesting life, first becoming a rock star in Japan, then as leader of the UK band, The Arrows, followed by three records with Rick Derringer, a solo album with Steve Winwood and Mick Taylor, a stint with Meatloaf, and the host and star of numerous TV shows. He is most well-known as the writer and lead singer of "I Love Rock 'N' Roll," recorded in 1975 with The Arrows and later made an international hit in 1982 by Joan Jett.
